INTRODUCTION

PREPARATION—METHOD OF ENTRY—ORTHOGRAPHY—INDICATION OF TONE—PUBLICATIONS CONSULTED—ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

PREPARATION

THE preparation of this dictionary was carried out under the auspices of the Bantu Studies Department of the University of the Witwatersrand and the Native Education Department, Natal, and towards this end both the Council of the University and the Provincial Education Department of Natal gave generous financial assistance over a period of seven years, and have, by further grants, made possible the publication.

The effort has been a co-operative one. In February 1937 I met a representative gathering in Durban called by the Chief Inspector of Native Education in order to gain interest and co-operation. At this conference useful suggestions were made as to manner of procedure and numerous details concerning the dictionary discussed. A committee of referees was later set up to collaborate with the compilers, and numerous individuals contacted who could give specialist information upon different subjects to be dealt with. The dictionary project was given publicity in the press and through the Native Teachers' Journal, and the interest of teachers especially was sought.

The compilers based their initial work upon A. T. Bryant's 1905 Zulu–English Dictionary, with the ready consent of the author, who wrote in 1937 that 'such a Zulu Dictionary as you forecast had sometime to come, and that time has come'. The need for a new Zulu dictionary was urgent. Both Bryant's outstanding work and the late R. C. Samuelson's King Cetywayo Zulu Dictionary were out of print; only Colenso's work, very sound but now out of date and inadequate in scope for the present requirements of the study of the language, was still procurable. Bryant's work, together with the standard set by Colenso, provided the type of Zulu chosen as fundamental, while the compilers felt it advisable to widen the scope somewhat to include contributions from other areas of Natal and Zululand.[1] Advantage was taken of the additional words included by Samuelson in his dictionary, of lists submitted by several correspondents, of words incorporated into Zulu from outside sources, particularly from English and Afrikaans, in order to meet the growing needs of modern conditions, and of the words culled from the growing literature of Zulu. Careful examination of ideophones and their derivatives, as well as all naturally formed derivatives of nouns and verbs, provided a further rich addition to the vocabulary recorded. Special attention was paid to the idiomatic use of words, as may be seen from a glance at the entries under hlaba and shaya. It was decided to include in the body of the dictionary, specially marked, the acquisitions from foreign languages, as well as a representative collection of the better-known hlonipha terms, used by the women. Similarly a certain number of technical, theological, and scientific terms have been included, and where these are of modern formation, such has been indicated. Ur-Bantu forms have been added to stems where they could be ascertained, and for this purpose advantage was taken of the lists provided in the Introduction to the Phonology of the Bantu Languages by C. Meinhof and N. J. van Warmelo, and in W. Bourquin's Neue Ur-Bantu-Wortstämme

[1] See Note I.

METHOD OF ENTRY

Throughout the dictionary entries have been made alphabetically under the initial of the stem[1] of each word, wherever it has been possible to ascertain this. There are cases where the stem-form is in doubt, particularly with certain nouns of classes 9 and 10 with a nasal compound in the prefix.[2] In such doubtful cases the entry has been made under the nasal. The following will illustrate the point. The word intini (otter), plural izintini, has been entered under -thini, the variant form umthini demonstrating that -thini is the stem; but in the case of intindili (useless person), the derivation being unknown, the entry is made under -ntindili. Naturally further information upon derivation may necessitate a later alteration in the position of certain words.

In entering NOUNS, the stem is followed by the full forms of the singular and plural with the tones of the singular. This has obviated all reference to class numbers, and permits the consultant to see the plural form as well as the singular. Words of similar stem are in close proximity, and unusual derivative forms are referred to under the parent form. Diminutive and locative forms if normal and bearing no unusual meaning are not included. The prefixes of nouns of classes 5 and 11 have been recorded as i(li)- and u(lu)- respectively, though in ordinary usage they appear as i- and u-. This will be clearly seen from the examples.[3]

VERB ENTRIES have been made under each significant stem. Following the entry with its tone pattern (generally 3.2.9, 3.3.2.9, etc., if of three or more syllables) is the derivation of the stem, if that is ascertainable; then the perfect stem of the verb, followed by the list of derivatives: first verbal (passive, neuter, applied, reciprocal, causative, intensive, and diminutive, with less-used forms such as the contactive, stative, extensive, perfective, reversive, and associative), then derivative nouns (arranged in alphabetical order according to the stems). In the case of monosyllabic verb stems, for purposes of tone-record, the imperative form has also been inserted. With other verbs, whose imperatives are alike in phone and tone, but which vary the tones elsewhere in the conjugation, infinitive tone-forms have been added, as in the case of shayela (3.2.9), where ukushayela (3.3.2.9.9) 'to drive' is the applied form of shaya, whereas ukushayela (2.6.6.3.9) is quite a different verb meaning 'to sweep', etc. It has been deemed wise to record the perfect stem of the verb even when regular (as shaya>-shayile), but the contracted perfect (e.g. -shayé) has been omitted.

PRONOUNS, whether absolute, demonstrative, or quantitative, have been included in all their forms, it being impossible to list them under stem-forms. QUALIFICATIVES, whether adjectival, relative, enumerative, or possessive, have been entered under their stems, though all possessives with pronominal stem have also been included in all their forms.

ADVERBS, IDEOPHONES, CONJUNCTIVES, and INTERJECTIVES have been entered under their initials as complete words. Since ideophones have extra-normal stress phenomena, the short stressed syllable is marked with an acute accent. In this way, for instance, the ideophone báqa (of lying flat, etc.) is clearly distinguished from the verb baqa (illuminate).

Reference should be made to Note VI when seeking for verb passives, noun diminutives, or locatives which have been subjected to palatalization. The regular rules are there set out. For instance the word lotshwa is the regular passive of loba and must be sought for thereunder, as it will not be entered separately. Similarly for incwajana the entry incwadi must be consulted, and for such a locative as empushini the entry impuphu. When a word cannot be found in the dictionary, if it ends in -wa (passive), -ana (diminutive), or -eni or -ini preceded by a palatal consonant (sh, tsh, j, or ny), consult Note VI and deduce the stem-form, which may then be referred to.

Regarding DERIVATIVES, all nouns derived from verbs have been included in the dictionary; similarly all verbs derived from ideophones have been included; but of verbal derivatives, i.e. verbs derived from verbs, lists have been arranged under the simple stem, but separate entries have been made only in the case of those which convey some meaning or idiomatic usage not deducible from the inherent significance of the derivative form; for instance gezela, applied form of geza (wash), means nothing more than 'wash for, wash at', the ordinary significance of an applied form, and does not therefore become a separate entry; whereas shayela, applied form of shaya (strike), in addition to its ordinary applied meaning of 'strike for, strike at', conveys also the meaning of 'drive', and is therefore entered separately. Unusual derivative forms, such as the neuter when it occurs with the suffix -akala, or the reciprocal when it conveys an associative meaning, are also entered separately.

SYNONYMS have been widely indicated after the meanings of words, and also cross-references to alternative renderings and to words where fuller information is to be obtained. In some cases long lists have been added referring to different varieties, such as cattle colours (under umbala), verbs indicative of looking, seeing, etc. (under bona), regiments (under i(li)butho), sticks (under induku), ideophones indicative of gaits and methods of walking (under hamba), shields (under i(li)hawu), ideophones indicative of postures (under hlala), fish (under inhlanzi), terms of relationship (under isihlobo), assegais (under umkhonto), shell-fish (under inkwindi), flies (under impukane), dogs (under inja), snakes (under inyoka), birds (under inyoni), love-charms (under isiphoso), verbs for striking (under shaya), and intoxicating drinks (under utshwala).

Wherever it has been considered to add enlightenment to the construction and syntactical use of words IDIOMATIC SENTENCES have been given; this is especially the case where words bear more meanings than one which need to be clearly differentiated. As far as possible, too, Zulu PROVERBS have been included as illustrative matter, not only in order to elucidate the meaning of the word under which they appear, but in order to enable the inquirer to discover the meaning and significance of the proverb itself. Proverbs have been entered under the most important word in them: at times it has been considered advisable to enter the proverb in more places than one in the dictionary, for instance Indlu yegagu iyanetha is referred to under indlu, i(li)gagu, and netha.

All FORMATIVES, such as prefixes, concords, infixes, and suffixes have been included in the dictionary, illustrated and explained.

After careful consideration it was decided that, apart from a few outstanding instances, PROPER NAMES of persons, tribes, and places, including izibongo, izithakazelo, and izithopho, should not be included in the body of the dictionary. The compilers felt that the whole subject was too large for them to undertake, and required a vast amount of research such as would be worthy of a separate publication at some future date. It was felt, too, that a mere list in an appendix would not meet the case.

ORTHOGRAPHY

The orthography employed[1] in the dictionary is that which was agreed upon by the Inter-University Committee on African Studies and the Natal Native Education Department, and is now regarded as official for all educational and literary purposes. This orthography is soundly based on phonetic principles and has few anomalies. Where these occur, special reference has had to be made in the dictionary. Owing to the non-indication of ejection (p, t, ts, etc., are phonetically p', t', ts', respectively), the present Zulu orthography does not differentiate between 'radical-k' and 'ejective-k'; the latter is indicated in the dictionary by placing k' after each entry. The velar pronunciation of h (phon. x) is an individual and dialectal variant to the glottal and is not recorded separately. Similarly the radical pronunciation of tsh, being but an emotional or dialectal variant of sh, is not recorded; tsh wherever recorded is regarded as the ejective variety (phon. tʃ').

There are, in Zulu, a very few instances of the nasal consonant occurring before a radical click (a common occurrence in Xhosa); no provision is made for this in the agreed Zulu orthography. We have felt it essential to record it in the dictionary and therefore have used the trigraphs nkc, nkq, and nkx respectively to differentiate it from the nasal click (nc, nq, nx).

A few foreign acquisitions have taken on non-Zulu features in consonantal combinations; these are dealt with under the entries kr, pr, st, and tr, where their occurrence is fully discussed.

For the sake of clarity, in the dictionary, hyphens have been used in certain cases where demonstratives preceding nouns have been compounded therewith. This is not in accord with the present orthography rules which prescribe a joining without hyphen. Such joining has here been done when the demonstrative is monosyllabic or when the noun stem is monosyllabic with monosyllabic prefix, e.g. lomuntu, leyonto; otherwise lowo-muntu, lezo-zinto, etc. Hyphens are used normally to join up enclitics which do not draw the stress forward, e.g. umuntu-nje, hamba-ɓo; but ufunani? hambake not hyphened.

Stress falls normally on the penultimate syllable of each word in Zulu and this normal stress is not therefore indicated. In the case of ideophones, which have initial stress and stress on short syllables, and in the case of certain instances of words with stress on the ultimate syllable, such abnormal stress is marked by an acute accent over the vowel concerned, e.g. dázu, míkithi, hálamzi, laphayá, kuló (as distinct from kulo), and contracted perfects such as ngifiké (as distinct from the subjunctive ngifike).

Length of vowels is not normally indicated, the stressed penultimate syllable of each word being normally long, as also the prefix of class 2a and the contracted prefixes of classes 5 and 11, and the indicative remote past tense concord. But since monosyllabic ideophones are often distinguished by the length of vowel, ideophones with abnormally long vowels are indicated by a doubling of such vowels, e.g. zwi (of a unit) and zwii (of overpowering noise).

In regard to the use of capitals, the new orthography decisions include the capitalizing of the initial letter of the stem of words indicating proper names, e.g. i(li)Ngisi, amaNgisi, uMpisi, oMpisi, uZulu. This means that when prefixal formatives precede such nouns the capital will be retained even though it then occurs in the middle of a word, e.g. kwaZulu, lwaseRoma, naseThekwini. This further means that when a proper name comes at the beginning of a sentence which should start with a capital letter, two capitals will occur in one word, either side by side, as in UMfaɓagiya waya emɓukisweni, or separated by some formative, as in AɓasekuKhanyeni isikole sakuɓo saphumelela.[1]

INDICATION OF TONE

In Zulu there are two types of tone: level tones and gliding tones. When using a level tone, one musical note is struck, and that pitch is maintained as long as the syllable lasts. With gliding tones the syllable commences on a certain musical note and glides to another before the end of the syllable. Gliding tones are, in Zulu, of three types: rising tones, falling tones, and rising-falling tones. Rising tones glide up the scale, falling tones glide down the scale, while rising-falling tones commence at a certain musical note, glide up to a higher, and then before the completion of the syllable glide down again to a lower; rising-falling tones are only found on long syllables.

[1] Cf. article on 'Zulu Orthography' by S. B. Theunissen in the Native Teachers' Journal, April 1943.

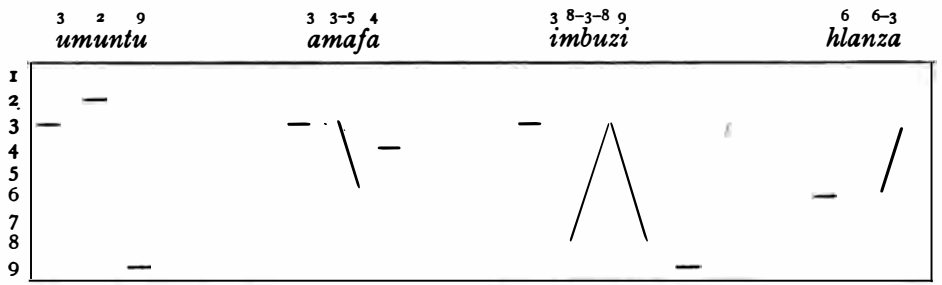
The Zulu speaker employs a nine-tone system; that is to say, his range of tones in speech covers nine different pitches. These nine tone points cannot be indicated in musical notation, for they depend upon relative and not absolute height. The intervals between the notes are the important things. The whole range is generally slightly above an octave, with a man much lower in the scale than with a woman.

No satisfactory method of recording the tones of Zulu words has yet been devised, and we have been forced to fall back upon that used in The Phonetics of the Zulu Language,[1] where the figures 1 to 9 have been used to indicate the tone heights of the various syllables.

The tones recorded are those of the word isolated or final in the sentence. In any other position, initial or medial, the tones will undergo various changes. The following are examples of tones, the highest tone being 1 and the lowest 9:



The tones are not absolute; for instance umuntu might be recorded as 4.3.9 or even as low as 5.4.9 without altering its significance; similarly shaya as 5.4, 4.3, or even 6.4. When, however, the interval between tones becomes exaggerated, significant difference may occur; for instance umuntu with tones 8.3.9 is a copulative meaning 'it is a person'. The intricate rules governing tonemes in Zulu have yet to be discovered. When they are, a simpler method of recording may be worked out.

Care must be taken over words of different meanings, phonetically alike, but differing in tone, as for instance hlanza 6.6–3 'wash' and hlanza 3.9 'vomit', or umsebenzi 2.2–4.4.3–8.9 'work' and umsebenzi 2.2–4.4.3.9 'workman'. Such words have each received a separate entry in the dictionary.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The following committee of referees was constituted: Rev. M. Borgen, Mr. R. Guma, B.A., Rev. K. A. Johnson, Mr. F. H. Khumalo, Mr. D. McK. Malcolm, Rev. G. C. Mdladla, Mr. W. W. Ndlovu, Rev. F. Suter, and Mr. S. B. Theunissen. To this committee the compilers referred twenty-seven long lists of words for their consideration. In most cases the referees worked upon the lists with groups of representative Zulu speakers, and we acknowledge most valuable help sent in from Messrs. Borgen, Guma, Khumalo, Malcolm, Mdladla, Suter, and Theunissen.

Special mention must be made of the help of the Rev. J. Gerstner, Ph.D., in placing at our disposal his published and unpublished collections of botanical terms, a large number of which have been incorporated in the dictionary. Where he himself had insufficient verification and where we could get no further confirmation, botanical entries were discarded. In addition Gerstner supplied considerable lists of natural history terms.

Grateful acknowledgement is also made to the Rev. W. Binder who submitted his extensive lists of additions to and comments upon Bryant's dictionary. These lists provided a number of new words and much additional material.

Besides acting on the Committee of Referees, the Rev. G. C. Mdladla assisted the compilers with considerable detailed work during 1940 upon the letters M and S, checking, elucidating, and providing illustrative sentences. He also went through a long list of English words suggesting Zulu equivalents which proved of considerable value.

In addition to his work on the Committee of Referees, the Rev. F. Suter showed continued deep interest in the preparation of the dictionary and gave much helpful advice. We acknowledge also the interest of the late Dean A. R. Kempe, who, among other things, suggested the inclusion of the Ur-Bantu roots. The Zulu Society, through its indefatigable secretary Mr. C. J. Mpanza, provided valuable information upon a number of points referred to it.

The Rev. O. Ripp provided considerable lists of new words, illustrative sentences, and a number of proverbs. The Rev. J. Dexter Taylor, D.D., sent in important lists of new words, some of which were culled from current Zulu literature. To Professor P. R. Kirby, M.A., D.Litt., we are indebted for the elucidation of the names of Zulu musical instruments; to Dr. L. E. Hertslet for information upon medical and anatomical terms; and to Dr. M. Gluckman for terms collected during his anthropological researches.

For examining a large portion of the current Zulu literature for new words we are indebted to Mr. J. M. Sikhakhana and Mr. F. S. Mncuße, B.A. Valuable lists of modern acquisitions from English and Afrikaans were provided by Mr. N. C. Zulu, Miss L. Scott, M.A., Mr. A. Madondo, Mr. J. F. Cele, and Mr. M. G. Mthembu, who also gave other helpful advice. To Mrs. A. J.

Nxaba we are indebted for lists of idioms. Mr. Z. A. Khumalo submitted lists of idioms, regimental names, and certain hlonipha terms.

Our collection of hlonipha terms was greatly enriched by long lists sent in by Mr. K. O. K. Mnguni. The late Rev. P. J. Gumede submitted a valuable list of new words. The Rev. W. Kick contributed a list of Roman Catholic theological terms.

Special reference must be made to the unceasing enthusiasm of Mr. D. McK. Malcolm, Chief Inspector of Native Education, Natal, who not only gave much time as one of the referees, but who organized much of the help which came to us from various Zulu teachers. The inspiration and encouragement received throughout from Mr. Malcolm have largely contributed to the successful conclusion of the long preparatory work.

For the preparation and typing of the manuscript acknowledgement is made to Miss I. Meier whose careful work has contributed much to the accuracy of the text.

Finally, as Editor, I wish to pay tribute to the part played by my co-compiler, Dr. B. W. Vilakazi, to whom a large portion of the fresh material in this dictionary is due. Not only did he supply a great number of the idiomatic sentences appearing throughout, but his pronunciation gave the tones recorded and to him are due in the main the details of etymology and derivative forms. It was in close consultation together, after gathering what information we could from referees and others, that we decided upon inclusion or exclusion of words and the niceties of meaning in many difficult cases. Our collaboration throughout this long work has been of the happiest. And now, after he had done his part in the reading of the galley proofs of this work, the untimely death, on 26 October 1947, of Dr. Vilakazi, cut off in the midst of further researches and literary activity, has deprived the African people of a brilliant son, one who not only achieved high academic standing, but whose life and personality gained for him a lasting place in their affections. This dictionary of his mother tongue—the language he loved—will stand as a monument to a great African.

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE SECOND EDITION

ADVANTAGE has been taken of the need for a second edition to make a number of corrections and improvements in the text, and to add a very considerable number of new words. For certain of these I gratefully acknowledge the continued interest of Rev. W. Binder who carefully went through the first edition and submitted lists. Many additions have come with the work on the English–Zulu dictionary still in process of compilation; and I wish to place on record my indebtedness to Mr. J. M. A. Sikhakhana, with whom I am in constant consultation.

In order to avoid the expensive upsetting of the whole type of the first edition, the new words are gathered into an Addendum at the end of the volume; the rightful place in the text, however, is indicated by a star ★, which will immediately direct the consulter's attention to the Addendum.

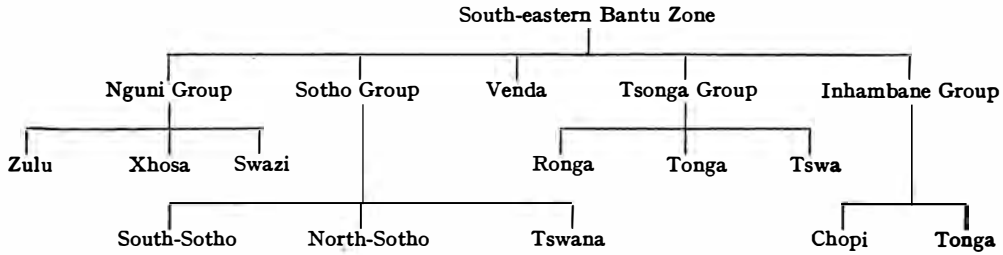
NOTE I

THE CLASSIFICATION OF THE ZULU LANGUAGE

ZULU is spoken throughout Zululand and Natal, the North-eastern Free State, the South-eastern Transvaal, and the Witwatersrand area, while dialectal forms are found in Ndebele in Matabeleland of Southern Rhodesia, in Ndebele of the Transvaal, and in Ngoni spoken in Nyasaland (particularly on the western side of the Lake) and in parts of Southern Tanganyika.

Zulu belongs to the South-eastern zone of Bantu languages, and its relationships are seen in the following table:



The purest Zulu is spoken in Central and Southern Zululand; in Northern Zululand Tonga influence is felt. Natal proper contributes largely to Zulu with certain modifications. In South Natal this is influenced from Xhosa, in the West from Southern Sotho. In the North of Natal is the Lala dialect bearing the tekeza influence of Swazi. In the coastal area from Durban northwards is the Qwaɓe dialect having the peculiarities of thefula. From literary Zulu tekeza and thefula forms are excluded, as well as influences from Xhosa, Sotho, and Tonga.

The importance of Zulu can be gauged from the fact that it embraces probably more than two million speakers, and in it literary development is growing apace.

NOTE II

THE ALPHABET AND PHONETIC SYSTEM OF ZULU

(a) Alphabet:

THE following is the order of the alphabet in Zulu: a, b, ɓ, c, d, e, f, g, h, i, j, k, l, m, n, o, p, q, (r), s, t, u, v, w, x, y, z.

Zulu sounds are divided into Vowels, Plain Consonants, and Clicks.

(b) Vowels:

As the mid-forward (front) and mid-back vowels in each case constitute single phonemes, only the symbols e and o respectively are required in writing Zulu. For descriptions and examples consult the dictionary entry at the commencement of each letter.

(c) Plain Consonants:

		Bilabial	Dentilabial	Alveolar	Prepalatal	Velar	Glottal
Explosive	Radical					k

THE NOUN CLASSES IN ZULU

(a) According to the Meinhof numbering:

	(Prefix)	(Examples)
1.	umu-, um-	umuntu, umlungu
1a.	u-	uɓaɓa, uNkulunkulu
2.	aɓa-, aɓe-	aɓantu, aɓelungu
2a.	o-	oɓaɓa, oZashuke
3.	umu-, um-	umuthi, umkhonto
4.	imi-	imithi, imikhonto
5.	i(li)-	i(li)zwe, i(li)khanda
6.	ama-	amazwe, amanzi
7.	isi-, is-	isitsha, isandla
8.	izi-, iz-	izitsha, izandla
9.	im-, in-, etc.	imbuzi, indaba
10.	izim-, izin-, etc.	izimbuzi, izimpondo
11.	u(lu)-	u(lu)thi, u(lu)phondo
14.	uɓu-	uɓukhulu, utshani[1]
15.	uku-	ukudla, ukuphila
16.	[pha-]	[phakathi, phezulu]
17.	uku-	ukunene, ukwindla

Bantu classes 12 (tu-), 13 (ka-), 18 (mu-); 19 (pî-), 20 (yu-), 21 (ya-), and 22 (yî-) are not found in Zulu. Class 16 no longer forms nouns in Zulu, but only locative adverbs; and class 17 is to-day mainly of adverbial significance with shortened prefix ku-.

[1] This is the palatalized form of original uɓu-ani.

(b) According to Zulu grammatical treatment:

	(Singular)		(Plural)
I.	umu-	umuntu	aba-	abantu

VII.		ubu-	ubukhulu
VIII.		uku-	ukudla

(i) By removing the prefix from the noun the stem is revealed, and it is under this stem that the word is entered in the dictionary; thus -ntu (umuntu, abantu), -baba (ubaba, obaba), -thi (u(lu)thi, izinti).

(ii) Only in poetical or rhetorical speech do the prefixes ili- and ulu- appear in Zulu; for ordinary purposes the prefixes are i- (long vowel) and u- (long vowel) respectively; thus izwe, ikhanda, uthi, uphondo. The dropped l, however, appears in every concord with words of these classes.

(iii) For the rules governing the various forms of the prefix in classes 9 and 10 see Note VII.

(ii) Classes 1a and 2a have the same concords as classes 1 and 2 respectively.

(iii) The subjectival concords given are those as used in plain predication or in an indicative present tense positive. For class 1, the subjunctive and potential mood concord is a-, the participial sub-mood concord is e-, and in negative tenses the concord is ka-, etc. For class 2 the participial mood concord is be-. For class 6 the participial mood concord is e- and in negative tenses wa- or ka-.

NOTE VI

PALATALIZATION IN ZULU

A PHONETIC process of considerable importance in Zulu is palatalization, by which a palatal consonant is substituted for one of another organic position in certain circumstances. Primarily palatalization is due to the incompatibility of bilabial consonants with the semi-vowel w, but its application is extended considerably farther than this in Zulu. The changes are as follows:

ph and th > sh.
b and d > j.
ɓ, p, and t > tsh.
m and n > ny.
mp and nt > ntsh.
mb and nd > nj.

The following are the instances of occurrence:

(1) In the formation of passives from verbs the consonant of whose final syllable is a bilabial (the w of the suffix -wa is retained):

ph	> sh.	hlupha	> hlushwa.
b	> j.	baba	> bajwa.
ɓ	> tsh.	hlaɓa	> hlatshwa.
m	> ny.	luma	> lunywa.
mp	> ntsh.	mpampa	> mpantshwa.
mb	> nj.	ɓamba	> ɓanjwa.

(2) In the formation of locatives from nouns whose final syllable is composed of a bilabial consonant followed by the vowel o or u (the w of the normal resultant -weni or -wini is dropped):

ph	> sh.	isiɓopho	> esiɓosheni.
b	> j.	isigubu	> esigujini.
ɓ	> tsh.	inguɓo	> engutsheni.
m	> ny.	umlomo	> emlonyeni.
mp	> ntsh.	uɓuphompo	> eɓuphontsheni.
mb	> nj.	umthombo	> emthonjeni.

(3) In the formation of diminutives of nouns and qualificatives:

(a) When the consonant of the final syllable is bilabial (the w expected with stems ending in o or u is dropped):

ph	> sh.	impuphu	> impushana.
b	> j.	isigubu	> isigujana.
ɓ	> tsh.	intaɓa	> intatshana.
m	> ny.	inkomo	> inkonyana.
mp	> ntsh.	inswempe	> inswentshana.
mb	> nj.	intambo	> intanjana.

[Monosyllabic stems are exceptions, e.g. impi > impana.]

(b) When the consonant of the final stem is alveolar, palatalization is not always compulsory (the w expected with stems ending in o or u is retained):

th	> th or sh.	umuthi	> umthana or umshana.
t	> tsh.	i(li)kati	> i(li)katshana.
d	> d or j.	incwadi	> incwadana or incwajana.
n	> ny.	inyoni	> inyonyana.
nt	> ntsh.	umkhonto	> umkhontshwana.
nd	> nd or nj.	i(li)sondo	> i(li)sondwana or i(li)sonjwana.

[Some monosyllabic stems are exceptions, e.g. umuntu > umntwana.]

(4) In the formation of certain nouns from primitive Bantu roots:

ɓ > tsh.	Ur-B. bu-ani	> Zulu utshani.
	Ur-B. bu-ala	> Zulu utshwala.
m > ny.	Ur-B. mu-ana	> Zulu unyana.
mb > nj.	Ur-B. mbwa	> Zulu inja.

NOTE VII

NASALIZATION AND NASAL CHANGES IN ZULU

THE prefixes of classes 9 and 10 (Meinhof) contain a nasal consonant homorganic to the initial phone of the stem, m before labials, n before alveolars, palatals (where n = phon. ɲ) and velars (where n = phon. ŋ), and ny before vowels; examples: imbuzi, imvu (phon. mɱ); indaba, inja (phon. i:ɲdʒa), inkomo (phon. iŋkʼɔ:mɔ); inyanga, inyoni. Recording of such words is further complicated by the fact that the homorganic nasal causes certain changes in initial consonants of stems, as follows:

(i) Aspirated explosives become ejective:

~ + ph > mp (phon. mpʼ).	u(lu)phaphe	> pl. izimpaphe.
~ + th > nt (phon. ntʼ).	u(lu)thi	> pl. izinti.
~ + kh > nk (phon. ŋkʼ).	u(lu)khezo	> pl. izinkezo.

(ii) Aspirated clicks become nasal clicks:

~ + ch > nc.	incwayi < v. chwaya.
~ + qh > nq.	inquɓu, cf. i(li)qhuɓu.
~ + xh > nx.	izinxushela, pl. < u(lu)xhushela.

(iii) Radical clicks become voiced:

~ + c > ngc.	u(lu)cezu	> pl. izingcezu.
~ + q > ngq.	u(lu)qweqwe	> pl. izingqweqwe.
~ + x > ngx.	ingxoxo	< v. xoxa.

(iv) Fricatives become affricatives, radical fricatives becoming ejective affricatives, and voiced fricatives becoming voiced affricatives:

~ + f > mf (phon. mɸfʼ).	u(lu)fudu	> pl. izimfudu.
~ + v > mv (phon. mβv).	u(lu)vu	> pl. izimvu.
~ + s > ns (phon. ntsʼ).	u(lu)suku	> pl. izinsuku.
~ + z > nz (phon. ndz).	u(lu)zipho	> pl. izinzipho.
~ + sh > ntsh (phon. ɲtʃʼ).	u(lu)shikishi	> pl. izintshikishi.
~ + hl > nhl (phon. ntɬʼ).	u(lu)hloɓo	> pl. izinhloɓo.
~ + dl > ndl)phon. ndɮ).	u(lu)dluɓu	> pl. izindluɓu.

(v) The bilabial implosive becomes voiced bilabial explosive:

$\sim + \text{ɓ} > mb$. u(lu)ɓambo > pl. izimbambo.

(vi) Before the semi-vowels and the glottal fricatives the nasal consonant drops away, though alternatively in the case of the glottal fricatives, $\sim + h$ may become nk and $\sim + hh$ may become ng:

$\sim + w$ > w.	u(lu)walakahla	> pl. iziwalakahla.
$\sim + y$ > y or ny (phon. ɲ)	u(lu)yaɓa	> pl. iziyaɓa or izinyaɓa.
$\sim + h$ > h or nk (phon. ŋkʼ).	u(lu)hambo	> pl. izihambo or izinkambo.
$\sim + hh$ > hh or ng (phon. ŋg).	u(lu)hhohho	> pl. izihhohho or izingohho.

(vii) Before vowels the prepalatal nasal, ny, is used: inyanga < -anga; inyoni < -oni. But as these stems can only be ascertained from a knowledge of comparative Bantu, such words are entered in the dictionary under ny-.

(viii) Before stems commencing in a nasal, no additional nasal appears:

-nqola > inqola; u(lu)monya > pl. izimonya.

NOTE VIII

DEFINITIONS

THE following are definitions[1] of terms used in the dictionary:

Absolute pronoun: That type of pronoun which, while indicating a certain noun (or person) does nothing further than indicate it, and in no way describes or limits it. In Zulu it is often used for purposes of emphasis.

Adjective: A word which qualifies a substantive, and is brought into concordial agreement therewith by means of the adjectival concord.

Adverb: A word which describes a qualificative, predicative, or other adverb with respect to manner, place, or time.

Affix: An element which is capable of being attached to or incorporated with a word, in order to modify its function, meaning, or value.

Affricate, Affricative consonant: A composite sound resulting from a compounding of an explosive consonant and its homorganic fricative.

Alveolar: Articulated by tongue-tip against the teeth-ridge or alveolus.

Applied form: A verbal derivative form, ending in the suffix -ela, which indicates that the action is applied on behalf of, towards, or with regard to, some object.

Aspirated consonant: An unvoiced consonant accompanied by an audible rush of air through the open glottis; indicated by the letter h following the consonant, e.g. th, qh.

Associative form: A verbal derivative form, ending in Zulu in the same suffix -ana as the reciprocal, but indicating that two or more subjects are associated together in the action of the verb.

Attributive: Designating a qualificative when standing with its substantive to denote the qualification as assumed instead of predicated.

Augmentative: Expressing augmentation, increase in size or bulk.

Auxiliary: A particle, often an infix, used to assist in forming moods, tenses, etc., of the verb.

Bilabial: Articulated by the action of the two lips combined.

Causative form: A verbal derivative form, ending in the suffix -isa, which indicates that the subject causes the action to be done.

Class: A grouping of nouns possessing potentially the same prefix.

[1] Taken to a large extent from Bantu Linguistic Terminology by C. M. Doke.

Click: An injected consonant produced by a rarefaction between tongue and palate.
Coalescence: A fusion, particularly of vowels, resulting in a new intermediate form.
Collective: Denoting a thing or material consisting of many units.
Complement: A subordinate verb following and completing a deficient verb.
Compound: That which is formed by a union or mixture of elements or parts.
Concord: Formal agreement of words to a noun in a sentence, achieved in Zulu by prefixal elements derived, to a large extent alliteratively, from the noun prefix.
Conjugation: A schematic arrangement of the inflexional forms of a verb.
Conjunction, Conjunctive: A word which introduces or links up sentences.
Consonant: A speech-sound, voiced or unvoiced, which is not sustained to such a length as to produce syllabification.
Construction: Arrangement and connexion of words in a sentence; syntactical arrangement.
Contactive: A verbal derivative form, marked by the suffix -atha, which indicates touching or contact of some sort.
Contingent: Liable or possible, but not certain to occur, dependent upon certain unlikely circumstances; applied to a mood in Zulu indicating unfulfilled past condition.
Co-ordinate: Equal in order or importance; used of sentences brought into equal relationship to one another.
Copulative: A word which does the work of a predicative, and which is formed directly from some other part of speech by modification of prefix or concord or by some other inflexion.
Defective: Imperfect or irregular in form or in the scope of its inflexions.
Deficient: Incomplete; a term applied to verbs which require a subordinated predication to complete them.
Definite: Having certain or distinct limits.
Deideophonic: Denoting a word derived from an ideophone.
Demonstrative pronoun: That type of pronoun which denotes the situation occupied in time, space, or conception of an object, relative to the person referring to it.
Denominative: Denoting a word derived from a nominal (substantival or adjectival) stem.
Dental: Articulated by the application of the tongue-tip to the upper front teeth.
Denti-labial: Articulated by the application of the lower lip and the upper front teeth.
Derivative: Not radical, original, or fundamental; a word derived from another by any process of word-development.
Descriptive: A word which describes a qualificative, predicative, or other descriptive.
Deverbative: Denoting a word derived from a verb.
Diminutive: Word or formative element (suffix in Zulu) which conveys the idea of smallness.
Disyllabic: Composed of two syllables.
Ejective: Articulated with simultaneous glottal closure, and compression of the air-passage above the glottis, giving characteristic sharpness to the enunciation.
Elision: The effacement or dropping of a sound, particularly of one vowel in the presence of another.
Emphatic: Conveying intensity or prominence.
Enclitic: A leaning-on word; a word which has lost its separate power, and has attached itself to the end of another word, partaking of the phonetic entity of that word.
Enumerative: A word which qualifies a substantive and is brought into concordial agreement therewith by the enumerative concord.
Euphemism: Decorous speech; a way of describing an offensive thing by an inoffensive expression.
Exclusive: Tending to exclude; the 'exclusive implication' of the verb excludes from the verbal action any previous occurrence to the one recorded.
Explosive: A consonant formed by momentary complete closure of the air-passage, the air being obstructed and, on release, issuing suddenly with explosion.
Extensive: A derivative form of the verb which indicates that the action is extended in time or space, or repeated extensively.
Feminine: Indicating the female.
Figurative: Emblematical, metaphorical.
Frequentative: Indicative of repetition of the action.
Fricative: Articulated with a narrowing of the air-passage between the organs of speech, so that the air issues with audible friction or hissing.

Glottal: Articulated, or modified in the throat.
Homorganic: Formed with the same organs of speech.
Ideophone: A word, often onomatopoeic, which describes a predicate, qualificative, or adverb in respect to manner, colour, sound, action, state, or intensity.
Idiom: A structural form or a form of expression peculiar to a particular language, and one which reflects the genius of the language and the psychological workings of the speakers of such language.
Imperative: A form of the verb conjugation expressive of command, and in Zulu having the function of an interjective.
Impersonal: Not indicative of or concerned with persons.
Implication: A subdivision of certain Zulu moods indicating whether anything regarding a previous state or action is implied.
Implosive: A closure sound, usually voiced, in the production of which there is a simultaneous closure of the glottis, the air between the two points of closure being rarefied by increasing the volume of the cavities, so that when the front release takes place an inrush of air results.
Indefinite: Undetermined; without distinct limits.
Indicative: A mood of the verb which represents the denoted act or state as an objective fact.
Infinitive: A form of the verb conjugation which has the function of a noun (of class 15), as well as being able to undergo verbal inflexions, assume an object, or take adverbial qualifiers.
Infix: An affix inserted within a word.
Instrumental: Designating the means by which an action has been effected.
Intensive form: A verbal derivative form, ending generally in -isisa, which expresses intensity or quickness of action.
Interjection, Interjective: An ejaculatory or isolated form of speech which has no grammatical or concordial bearing upon the rest of the sentence.
Interrogative: A term which carries the interrogation, or confers upon a phrase the value of a question.
Intonation: The variation and sequence of the musical pitch of the voice in words and in connected speech.
Intransitive: Expressing an action or state as limited to the subject, or as ending in itself.
Labial: Articulated or modified by the action of the lips.
Lateral: A speech-sound articulated with central obstruction of the tongue and escape of air over one or both sides of the tongue.
Locative: In Zulu, an adverb of place formed by inflexion from a substantive.
Masculine: Indicating the male.
Metaphor: A rhetorical figure of speech by which a word or phrase literally denoting one kind of object or idea is applied to another to suggest a likeness between them.
Metathesis: A transposition of letters or sounds in a word.
Monosyllabic: Composed of one syllable.
Mood: A special form assumed by the verb in order to mark some special manner in which that connexion between a subject and a predicate which every verb implies is viewed by the speaker.
Nasal: Articulated with the air passing through the nose.
Negative: Indicating denial; a conjugation of the verb expressing a separation of subject and predicate.
Neuter form: A verbal derivative form, ending in -eka or -akala, which indicates an intransitive state or condition without any special reference to an agent determining that condition.
Nominal: Pertaining to the noun.
Noun: A word which signifies the name of anything concrete or abstract.
Object: The substantive acted upon by a verb.
Objectival: Pertaining to the object.
Obsolete: Fallen into disuse.
Occasional: Pertaining to an occasion; acting or occurring now and then.
Onomatopoeia: Imitation in word of sound, approximating thereto.
Optative: Expressive of desire or wish.
Oral: Enunciated with the air-flow passing solely through the mouth.
Orthography: Art or method of writing words with the proper symbols according to standard usage.
Palatal: Articulated by tongue-centre against the hard palate.
Palatalization: A phonetic process by which a palatal consonant is substituted for one of another organic position.

Palato-alveolar: Articulated with tongue-tip and the junction of alveolus and hard palate.
Parenthetical: Used by way of comment or explanation, inserted in, or attached to, a sentence grammatically complete without it.
Participial: A sub-mood of the verb generally indicating concomitant state, situation, or action.
Passive form: A verbal derivative form, ending in -wa or -iwa, which indicates that the subject is acted upon, affected, or produced by outside force or agency.
Penult, Penultimate: The last but one, especially with reference to the last syllable but one.
Perfect: A verb form of which the fundamental indication is the resultant state.
Perfective form: A verbal derivative form, ending in -elela, which indicates that the action is complete, perfected.
Persistent: Tending to persist or continue steadfastly.
Person: One of the three relations underlying discourse, called respectively: the first person, the speaker; the second person, the one spoken to; and the third person, the one spoken of.
Personal: Denoting person.
Personification: A figure of speech in which an inanimate object or an impersonal creature is endowed with attributes of a person.
Phone: A single elemental sound in speech.
Phoneme: A family of sounds in a given language, consisting of an important sound of the language together with other related sounds, which take its place in particular sound sequences.
Phonetic: Pertaining to speech-sounds; according to a system representing speech-sounds in symbol.
Plural: Designating more than one, particularly pertaining to the form of a word in virtue of which it denotes more than one.
Polysyllabic: Composed of many syllables.
Positive: Expressing reality or confirmation; affirmative; a conjugation of the verb expressing a union between the subject and the predicate.
Possessee: The thing or person possessed.
Possessive: A word which qualifies a substantive and is brought into concordial agreement therewith by the possessive concord.
Possessor: The person or thing which possesses.
Potential: A mood of the verb expressive of ability to act.
Predicative: A word which signifies an action connected with a substantive, or the state in which a substantive is.
Prefix: An affix attached to the beginning of a word or stem.
Prepalatal: Articulated by tongue-centre against the junction of the alveolus and hard palate, a more forward position on the palate being affected than for true palatals.
Proclitic: Forward-leaning word; a word which has lost its separate power, and has attached itself to the beginning of another word, partaking of the phonetic entity of that word.
Progressive: Pertaining to a moving forward of the action; the 'progressive implication' of the verb implies that the action or state indicated has been going on previously.
Pronominal: Pertaining to the pronoun.
Pronoun: A word which signifies anything concrete or abstract without being its name.
Quadrisyllabic: Composed of four syllables.
Qualificative: A word which qualifies a substantive.
Quantitative: Indicative of quantity or number.
Radical: Basic; the simplest form.
Reciprocal form: A verbal derivative form, ending in the suffix -ana, expressive of mutual action.
Reduplication: A doubling or repetition.
Reflexive: Denoting an action that is directed back upon the agent or subject.
Relative: A word which qualifies a substantive and is introduced by the relative concord.
Reversive form: A verbal derivative form, usually ending in -ula or -ulula, which indicates an entire reversal of the action.
Rolled: Articulated by an automatic succession of rapid taps of a mobile organ of speech such as the tongue-tip.
Root: The irreducible element of a word; the primitive radical form without prefix, suffix, or other inflexion, and not admitting of analysis.

Semantic: Pertaining to meaning.
Semi-vowel: A sound articulated with the tongue and lips in the position for vowels, but the articulating organs held so tensely that consonantalization takes place.
Singular: Individual, particularly pertaining to the form of a word in virtue of which it denotes only one person or thing.
Stative: Indicative of a state already achieved and still persisting.
Stem: That part of a word depleted of all prefixal inflexions.
Stress: The force-beat of syllables, designed to bring particular ones into relative prominence.
Subject: The word denoting that of which something is affirmed: in Zulu the commanding substantive in a sentence.
Subjectival: Pertaining to the subject.
Subjunctive: A mood of the verb expressing the action or state not as a fact but only as a contingent and dependent mental conception.
Subordinate: Inferior in order or importance; used of a sentence brought into subservient relationship to another.
Substantive: A word signifying anything concrete or abstract or any concept.
Suffix: An affix attached to the end of a word or stem.
Syllable: A sound or combination of sounds uttered with a single impulse of the voice.
Synonym: One of two or more words of the same language having the same or approximately the same essential meaning.
Syntactical: Pertaining to syntax, the arrangement of words into sentences.
Tense: A form assumed by the verb to express distinctions of time.
Tone: The musical modulation of the voice in speech.
Transitive: Expressive of an action as not limited to the agent or subject, but ending in a direct object.
Trisyllabic: Composed of three syllables.
Ultimate: The last, especially with reference to the last syllable of a word.
Unvoiced: Articulated without any accompanying voice or vibration of the vocal chords.
Ur-Bantu: The hypothetical parent language, from which the present Bantu languages are supposed to have sprung.
Velar: Articulated by the back of the tongue against the velum or soft palate.
Verb: A word which signifies an action connected with a substantive or the state in which a substantive is, and is brought into concordial agreement therewith by the subjectival concord.
Vocative: An interjective formed from a noun for purposes of calling attention or summoning.
Voiced: Articulated with accompanying vibration of the vocal chords.
Vowel: A voiced speech-sound in the production of which the breath has sustained passage sufficient to produce syllabification.

A

a The low vowel in Zulu; tongue-position rather nearer to phonetic cardinal vowel No. 5 than to No. 4, and therefore a back vowel; the mouth is fairly wide open and the lips somewhat rounded. B b Voiced bilabial explosive. In Zulu this is pronounced with voiceless stop when used initially. In the combination mb the nasalization of the stop produces voicing and the b is pronounced as in English.

b is phonemically distinct from ɓ (implosive), as for instance beka (look) and ɓeka (place). Stems of nouns commencing in imb are sometimes recorded under ɓ; sometimes under mb. When, however, it is ascertainable that the initial of the root is b, and in cases where the real initial is to-day unascertainable, these words are recorded under b.
Under the influence of palatalization b>j (phon. dʒ), e.g. baba (entrap)>pass. bajwa.

Б

б Bilabial implosive consonant, phonemically distinct from b.

This is very commonly found in Zulu, occurring in the cl. 1 pl. prefix aба- and in all concords therewith, also in the cl. 7 prefix иби- and its concords. Under nasal influence б becomes mb, e.g. ибambo (rib) > pl. izimbambo. Under the influence of palatalization б becomes tsh, e.g. loба (write) > pass. lotshwa.

бa- enum. concd. cl. 1 pl. Ngaбantu бaphi? (Which people are they?)

бa- obj. concd. cl. 1 pl. Musani ukuбahlupha (Don't annoy them). Impi yaбaбulala (The army killed them).

бa- poss. concd. [> бa-, бe- or бo- by coalescence.]

1. cl. 1 pl.: aбangane бaбo (their friends); omese бaбafana (the boys' knives).

2. cl. 7: ибuhle бakhe (her beauty).

бa- v. subj. concd. cl. 1 pl. (in all moods except particip. sub-mood). Aбantu бahlakaniphile (The people are wise). Бamhlophe (They are white). Aбalapha (They are not here). Maбeze (maba+(i)ze) Let them come).

бa- [ba:] subj. concd. cl. 1 pl. (бa-+past aux. -a-.) Бagoduka nyakenye (They went home last year). Бaбelwa (They were fighting).

бa- [ba:] subj. concd. cl. 7 (бu-+past aux. -a-). Utshwala бaбuhle (The beer was nice).

-бa aux. v. [Ur-B. va. > perf. -бe; ap. бela; defic. v. -бe; akwaba, kungaba, kungaбe, ukuba.]

Become; be.

1. Used in the conjugation of copulatives, in the following tenses: Infin.: ukuбakhona (to be present); ukungaбikho, ukungaбikhona (not to be present). Imper.: yiбakhona, бanakhona (be present); yiбanikhona, бaninikhona (be ye present). Indic. fut.: ngiyoбakhona (I shall be present). Subjunct.: aбekhona (that he be present); angaбikho (that he be not present). Potent.: angaбakhona (he can be present); angeбekho (he cannot be present).

2. Used with copulatives formed from: (a) Nouns: ukuбangumuntu (to be or become a person). (b) Pronouns: ukuбayiбo (to be or become they). (c) Adjectives: ukuбamkhulu (to be or become big). (d) Relatives: ukuбaqotho (to be or become honest). (e) Adverbs: ukuбalapho (to be there); ukuбasemzini (to be in the village).

[N.B. Rel. stems and adverbs commencing in consonants are uninflected after -ba; adverbs commencing in vowels assume prelocative -s-; while nouns, pronouns, and adjectives assume cop. form.]

3. The perf. stem -бe is used in the formation of past and fut. continuous and perf. tenses of the indic. mood, e.g. ngiбe ngithanda, бengithanda (I was loving); ngiбe ngilele, бengilele (I was asleep); ngiyokuбe ngithanda (I shall be loving); ngiyokuбe ngilele (I shall be asleep). In this the stem approximates to that of a deficient verb. [see under -бe.]

4. The indef. form of the subjunct. is used as a conj. [see under kuбe.]

5. The infin. form ukuba (with loc. ekuбeni) may at times stand alone, e.g. ukuбasemzini (to be in the village); ukuba kwakhe emzini (his presence in the village); ekuбeni kwakhe emzini (at his presence in the village).

c (phon. ɟk). This symbol represents the dental click, pronounced with back of tongue raised to touch soft palate, tip of tongue placed lightly against upper front teeth and gums, centre of tongue depressed; in enunciation tip of tongue is drawn backwards. The radical form is represented by c, the aspirated by ch, the voiced by gc, and the nasal by nc. The velar nasal consonant before the voiced form is represented by ngc, and the rare instances of the velar nasal before the unvoiced form by nkc.
The radical form, c, under homorganic nasal influence, becomes ngc, e.g. u(lu)cezu (slice) > pl. izingcezu.

e: The mid-forward vowel in Zulu. There are two distinct pronunciations of this vowel in Zulu, but as they belong to but one phoneme only one symbol is necessary in a practical orthography. The two pronunciations are: (i) e, close mid-forward vowel; tongue-position slightly lower than for phon. cardinal vowel No. 2; lips decidedly spread. This is a pure vowel, practically equivalent to the first element in the Southern English diphthong in the word 'way' (wei). This vowel occurs short (e) and long (e:) without change in quality. (ii) ɛ, open mid-forward vowel; tongue-position slightly lower than that for phonetic cardinal vowel No. 3. This is a pure vowel, practically equivalent to the first element in the Southern English diphthong in the word 'wear' (wɛə). This vowel occurs short (ɛ), long (ɛ:) and with prolonged length (ɛ::) in Zulu: it is normally long when penultimate in a word, and prolonged in certain ideophones. Examples: ne:kha:nda, phezu:lu, le:li, wɛ:na, we:thu, ɛla:khɛ, uku:thi bidʒɛlezi, uku:thi ntɛ:: These would be written in the current orthography as follows: nekhanda, phezulu, leli, wena, wethu, elakhe, ukuthi bijelezi, ukuthi ntee.

The rules governing the quality interpretation of these two vowels are as follows:

(a) If the vowel of the succeeding syllable in the same word (or word-group) be i or u, or if the succeeding syllable consist of syllabic m, the mid-forward vowel is of high quality (e).

(b) If the vowel of the succeeding syllable in the same word (or word-group) be other than i or u, the mid-forward vowel is of low quality (ɛ).

(c) If the mid-forward vowel be long and in a position where there is no main stress, it is always of high quality, despite the quality of the vowel of the suceeding syllable.

ezim-, ezin- adj. concd. cls. 4, 5, & 6 pl. (the form of the nasal in this concord is homorganic to the initial consonant of the adjectival stem, and causes certain modifications in the initial consonant). izinkunzi ezintathu (three bulls); izalukazi ezinde (tall old women).

ezin- adj. concd. cls. 4, 5, & 6 pl. [See under ezim-.]

f Unvoiced denti-labial fricative. Under homorganic nasal influence this becomes an ejective affricate, written mf. By false analogy when the syllabic -m precedes f the latter becomes the ejective affricate (recorded mf' in dictionary entries); but this process does not take place when the f commences a recognized verbal stem; e.g. umf'ula (river), pl. imf'ula or imif'ula; umf'ana (boy), pl. aɓafana; but umfundi (scholar)< funda (learn) and umfundisi (teacher)<fundisa (teach), while umf'undisi (minister) is no longer conceived as being derived from fundisa.
